ALWAYS EAGER TO CREATE
EXTRAORDINARY WEDDINGS,
RANDI NONNI PUTS HER FLORAL
SKILLS TO WORK

Randi Nonni has been in love with Vermont for many years. After relocating from Boston to Vermont to pursue her own wedding and event-design business in 2003, she instantly loved her new home. That is why she could not have been happier to work with Vicki Becker and Dan Zgodny when they told her that the mission of their Stratton Mountain wedding was for their friends and family to walk away with a sense of Vermont's natural beauty, and the love they had for their "home away from home."

{ I LOVE VERMONT } RANDI NONNI OF SILVER TOAD FLORAL DESIGN LOVES TO MAKE WEDDING DREAMS COME TRUE, ESPECIALLY WHEN THEY INVOLVE THE BEAUTY OF HER HOME STATE.

 RANDI'S MOTTO: "use vendors you really like that can work within your budget, trust your feelings ~ you will know who is right for you".

RANDI'S ADVICE

- No. 1 don't limit your color palette! ask your floral designer for help if you're not sure what will work, and remember to share with them the styles you prefer. this will help to get a feel for the look you love.
- No. 2 trust your vendors to do the job you hired them to do so you can really enjoy the day of the wedding. sometimes we need to make changes along the way, but trusting your vendors to know you and your needs is crucial to the process.

UNVEILED green mountain love

“After hearing the couple's ideas, Randi was determined to give Vicki and Dan an elegant yet relaxed fall wedding that would make their guests feel right at home.”

Inspired by her cousin's wedding in California, Vicki drew inspiration from vineyards in Napa Valley while still embracing Vermont's natural fall colors. After hearing the couple's ideas, Randi was determined to give Vicki and Dan an elegant yet relaxed fall wedding that would make their guests feel right at home.

Vicki and Dan were blessed with good luck on their wedding day, though not in the way that many couples tend to hope for — the day brought sheets of relentless rain. Without a second thought, Randi and the fabulous staff of Stratton Mountain moved the event indoors to the lovely Mountain Club Great Room and got to work on making the couple's vision come to life.

Adding a bit of whimsy to the décor, Randi brought in a live tree with the couple's initials adorably etched on the side to complement their tree-themed save the date cards. In keeping with her autumnal vision, the bride brought beautiful silk leaves marked with each guest's name. Randi carefully fanned them out underneath the tree to evoke tousled autumn foliage. Inspired by the moss pomanders at her cousin's wedding yet eager to make them unique, Vicki requested they be designed in deep shades of New England's traditional fall colors — vibrant reds, oranges, and yellows. They added clear glass cylinders filled with pears, curly willow, and bittersweet to each table to offset the lowness of the pomanders.

When the guests arrived, they were warmly welcomed by sweetly twinkling candles placed on the mantle and windowpanes, creating a romantic and elegant atmosphere that made everyone instantly forget about the rain.

As for the wedding itself, Vicki and Dan were delighted with the results. Vicki left Randi a lengthy voicemail expressing her gratitude for helping create such a magical evening. As a seasoned wedding professional who will soon be celebrating her 300th wedding in the business, Randi admits that she never tires of these kinds of calls. “It really is why we do what we do, and why we love what we do so much.” When it comes to making couples' dreams come true in the picturesque state of Vermont, what's not to love?
